2023 Yearly Flying Star Chart

2023 Flying Star Feng Shui Yearly + Period 8 Chart

Summary

The above chart is a summary of the 2023 Flying Star Feng Shui based on the annual Flying Star chart and the Period 8 chart. We will also look at the afflictions such as Tai Sui, Sui Po (Year Breaker), and San Sha (3 Killings) later.

The best direction of 2023 include North and West, Center and South are also lucky. Because we have Tai Sui star on the East and Sui Po plus San Sha on the West, North and South are better than East and West this year in general.

The areas with health concerns are related to stars 2 and 5. In 2023, the illness star is in the East, and the misfortune star is in the Northwest. Place any Metal Feng Shui cures or Salt water cure there to reduce inauspicious energy.

The South always shows on the top of the traditional Chinese map, so you can turn around to match the modern map, and overlap on top of your floor plan. Your main entrance, bedroom, or main area tend to be affected more by the stars. Use the 5 element suggested in each sector to reduce negative stars, balance energy, and enhance lucky stars. Next, let's look at the Flying Star combinations for the 9 sectors.
